Let us tell you Vince Papale's story

You've probably heard of Vince Papale. That's what happens when his life story features Mark Wahlberg in a Disney production. But you might not know just how powerful that story, and the lessons drawn from it, become once you hear it first-hand from the real deal. The movie's name was Invincible. Listen to Papale's story, and you understand where that name comes from. He was 30 years old when, as a high school teacher and parttime bartender, he entered a public tryout by for his beloved hometown Philadelphia Eagles. The rest, quite literally, his history. During his late-70s run with the Eagles, he played a core part in turning around the franchise and giving the fans something to cheer for. He was voted Philadelphia Eagles Man of the Year in 1978 and named the team's most outstanding special teams player at its 75th-anniversary celebration in 2007.

End the story there, and it's worthy of its Hollywood fame. Papale just happened to add cancer survivor' to his list of accomplishments. In 2001, he was diagnosed with colorectal cancer. After he beat the disease, he became an advocate for getting regular screenings and check-ups and helping others stay healthy. Today, he's a business executive. He remains friends with Wahlberg, who portrayed him so accurately in the 2006 movie. And he's made a name for himself speaking on a variety of topics:

- Health and wellness, wowing audiences with his mix of compassion and humor.
- Education, emphasizing the importance of continued learning and mentorship.
- Leadership, spreading the word about the Papale Playbook of leadership that draws from his own life story.
- Motivation, focusing on the ability to seize opportunities, overcoming the odds, and fulfilling your potential.
- Team building, including compassionate lessons to inspire your team and helping them make their goals and dreams come true.

Through it all, he bursts with energy. You can almost imagine him stepping back on the field and proving to himself and an entire city that anyone can make it. Few have the excitement and joy for life come through so clearly in their speeches. With Vince, as with everything he's done, it seems almost effortless--until you realize the effort behind it. When you book Vince Papale for your event, you don't just get the movie star. You also get a compassionate, dynamic, and surprisingly funny personality that resonates with all who listen. Book him today to transform your event.
